Synopsis

Joseph Hinshelwood was born at South Hetton, near Hetton in County Durham, and worked as a coal miner. He had previously served in the 3rd Battalion of the Royal Scots before attesting for short service in the regular Royal Scots at Edinburgh on 30 October 1883, aged eighteen years and six months. His regimental number was 1165.

At enlistment he was recorded as 5 feet 7 1/2 inches tall and weighing 123 pounds, with a 33-inch chest, a sallow complexion, blue eyes and brown hair. His religion was Presbyterian. Distinctive marks included a scar on the left thigh and a birthmark on the left shoulder and buttock.

His military history records home service from 30 October 1883 to 4 November 1884, followed by service in South Africa. He took part in the Bechuanaland Expedition of 1884-85. A fourth-class certificate of education was awarded on 26 February 1884.

The later service statement is unusual. It records that he deserted on 13 September 1889 and did not rejoin until 16 November 1900. He was then discharged with a protection certificate, apparently pending further consideration of his case. An annotation indicates that good-conduct pay had been forfeited. The papers therefore span 1883-1900, but the long period of absence was not ordinary continuous reckonable service.

Research notes

- The 1883-1900 span is a document range, not continuous service: the record explicitly records desertion in 1889 and return in 1900.
- The exact wording of the November 1900 administrative action and good-conduct-pay forfeiture needs closer transcription.
- Muster books and pay lists may establish his South African postings and the circumstances of his absence.
